Library Service Expands in 2025

The Windsor Public Library is ready to expand service and take the guesswork out of operating hours in 2025.

Beginning Thursday, January 5, 2025, nine branches will be open seven days a week, and hours of operation will be standardized across the board. Only the Local History branch will be unavailable on Sundays.

“We’re making access to the great services our library system provides a seven-day-a-week opportunity” said Library Board Chair Mark McKenzie. “We know families need books, computers, and programming all week long, and this service expansion will provide that.”

The open hours for the nine branches are being standardized as noon to 8:00 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays and 10:00 a.m to 6:00 p.m all other days. “Our board has listened to the residents who told us they were looking for more consistency and we’re excited to be moving forward with these improvements”, said McKenzie.

The expanded service and standardizing of hours were approved by the library board following public consultation and were approved during contract negotiations with the library workers’ union.
